FOREWORD

A blaze of color, the excitement of a thronging crowd, the tantalizing aroma of french fries and hot dogs! Indispensable parts of a Dallas October are these familiar reminders of the State Fair of Texas.

Although the Fair's autumn exposition lasts only two weeks, its modern buildings and landscaped grounds serve the city as centers of culture and recreation throughout the year.

To the high school student the Fair's wide variety of activities holds a unique appeal. Tying in with his studies are the Museum of Fine Arts and the Hall of State; typical of his favorite pastimes are games in the Cotton Bowl, programs in Fair Park Auditorium, and thrills along the Midway. Most of all, the growth of the Fair every year parallels the student's ever-widening horizon of new thoughts and ideas.

Because the State Fair is such a vital part of life in Dallas, the Staff has chosen it to help portray the various phases of life at Woodrow Wilson during the past year.

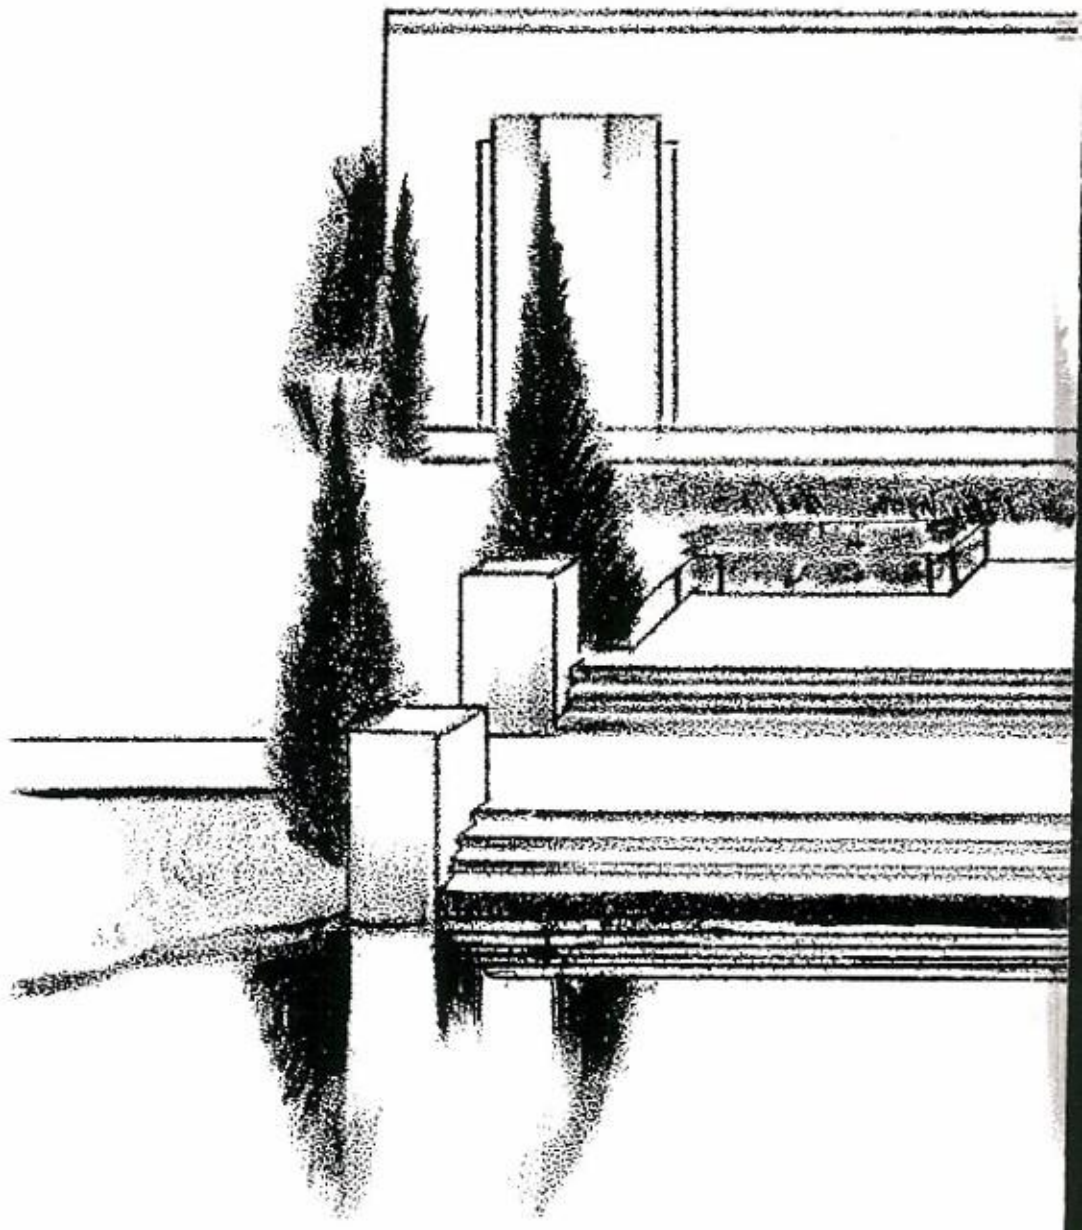
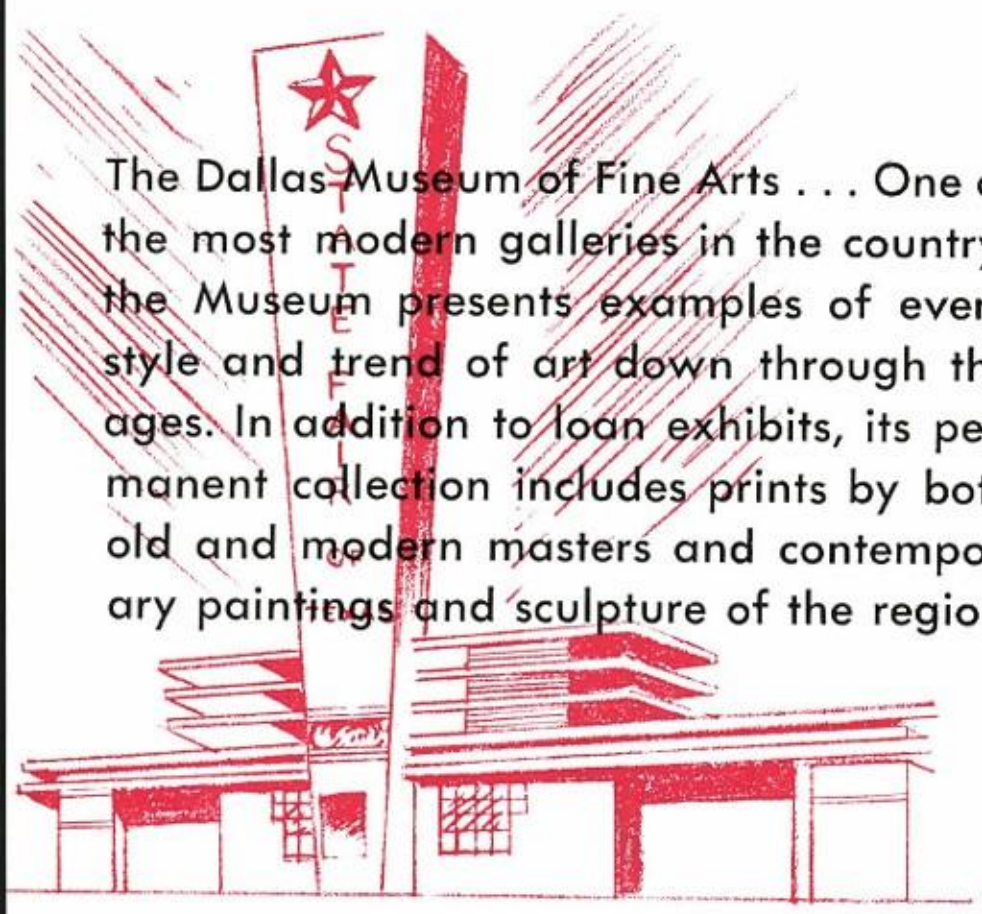
Faculty and Administration





The Dallas Museum of Fine Arts . . . One of the most modern galleries in the country, the Museum presents examples of every style and trend of art down through the ages. In addition to loan exhibits, its permanent collection includes prints by both old and modern masters and contemporary paintings and sculpture of the region.

"Pop"

Not with disrespect,
but with a real affection
and pride do Woodrowites refer to their principal as "Pop." As a counselor, as a leader, and most of all as a friend will they remember him throughout the years to come.

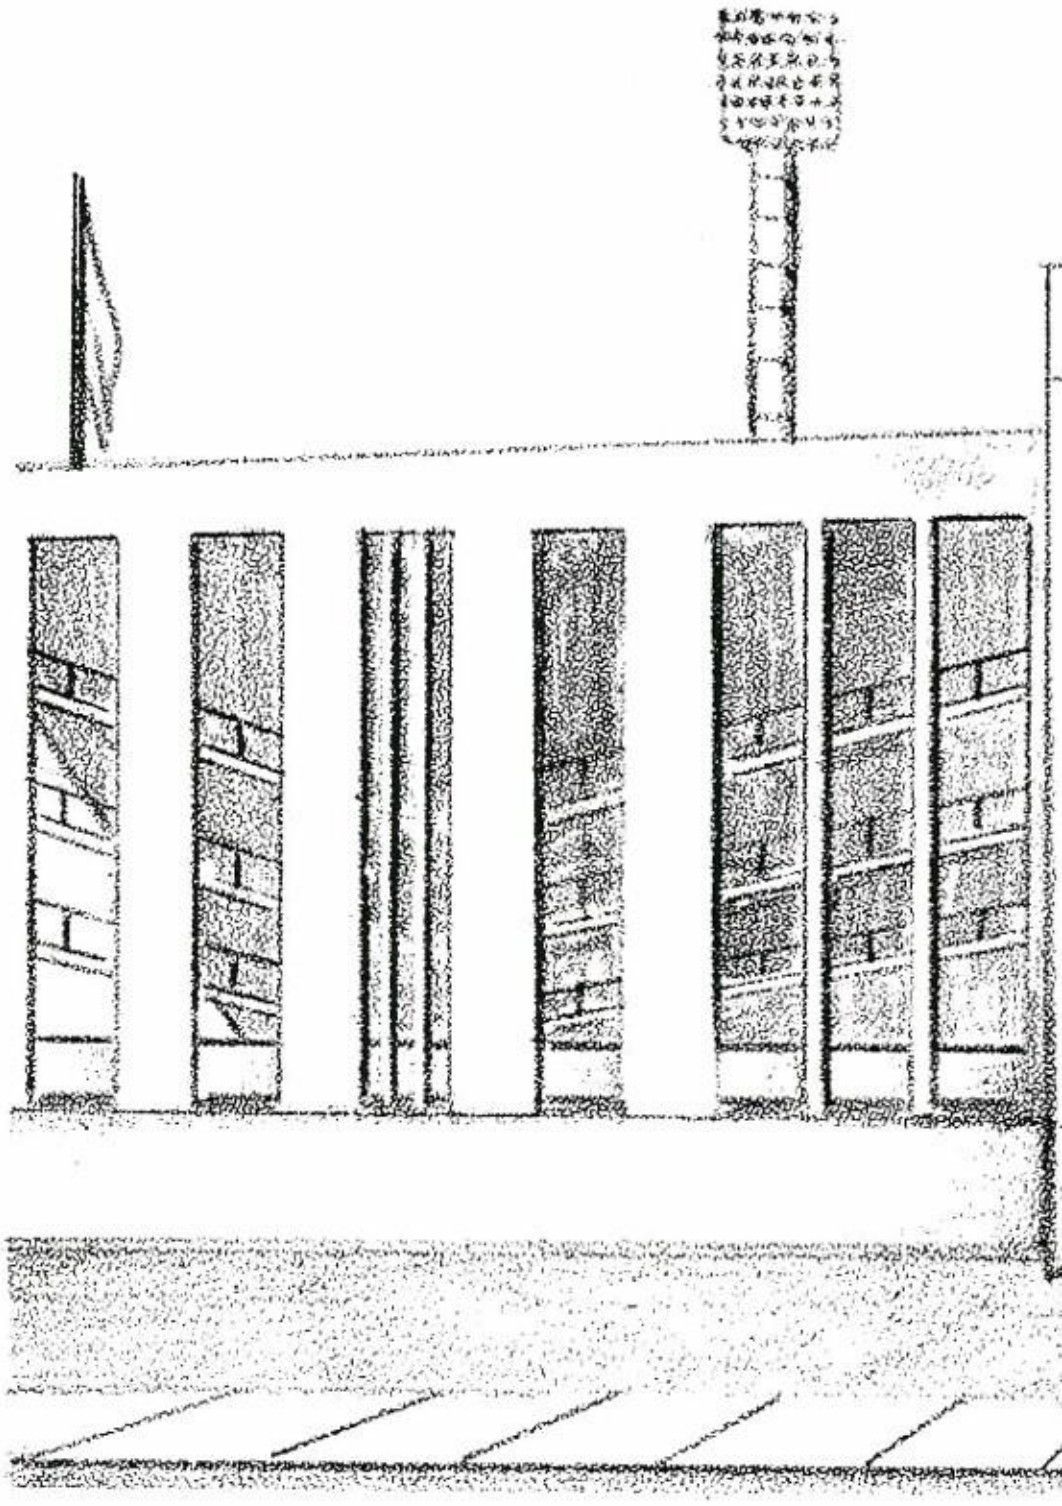
MARGARET BROCKLES

As the Crusader goes to press the Senior Class of June, 1951 wishes to pay some small tribute to the courage and spirit displayed by Margaret Brockles in her fight against spinal and bulbar polio. Now undergoing treatment at Georgia Warm Springs Foundation, Margaret had planned to graduate with this class until the summer of 1950, when she contracted the disease. As she was not in school this year, her picture could not be placed in its regular position in the classes section. But because she belongs there as much as any other senior, the staff fondly dedicates this page "To Margaret."

Athletics



The Cotton Bowl . . . During Fair time this outstanding sports center provides a riot of color, typical of the southwest and unmatched any place else in the nation. Another annual feature is the New Year's Day Cotton Bowl Classic, matching the Southwest Conference Champion against one of the leading teams of the nation. Seating 75,000, the stadium provides ample spectator space for programs throughout the year.

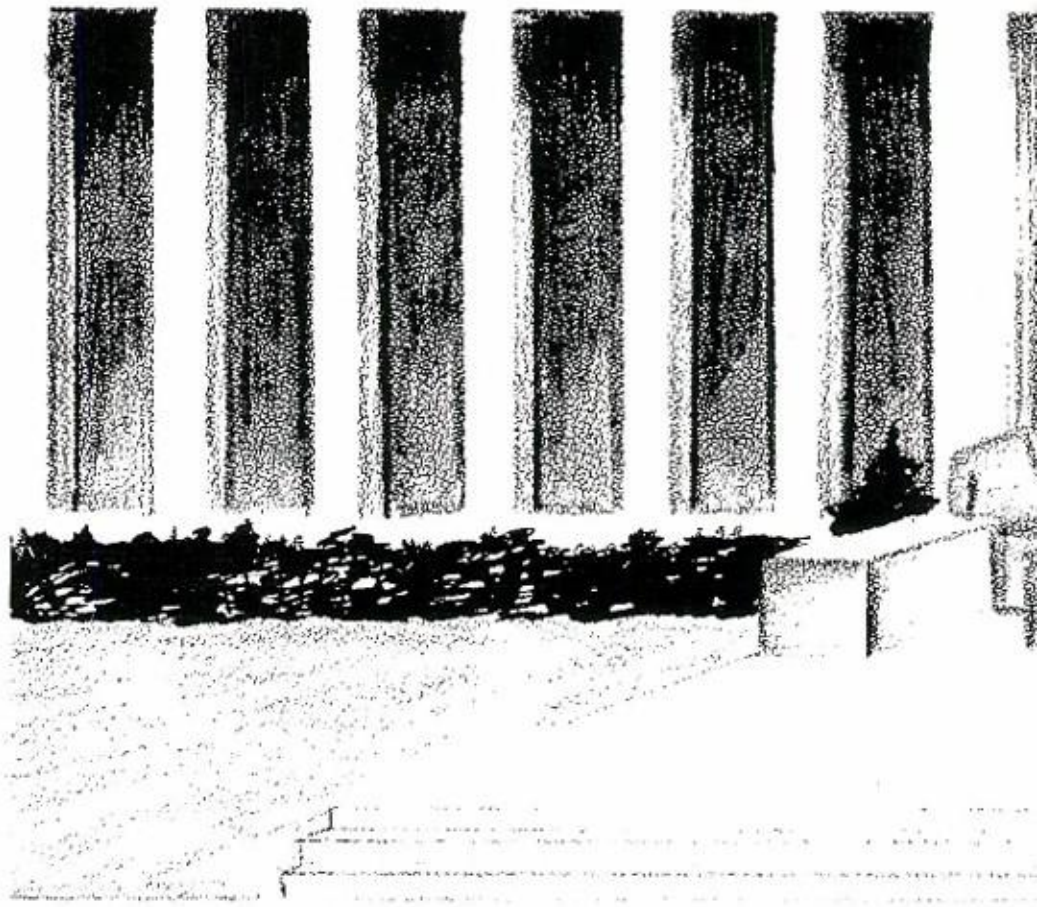
Military



The Hall of State . . . Shrine of Texas heroes . . . Memorial to the pioneers who built a great empire out of a wilderness . . . This million-dollar structure, displaying a wealth of historical material, reflects the glories of early-day Texas in exhibits of pioneer clothing, furniture, and implements.

"Largest R.O.T.C. of its kind in the world" is the boast of the Woodrow Wilson Military Department. Under the able direction of Major R. M. Neher, the military courses include courtesy, hygiene, first aid, map reading, organization and drill. In addition, cadets are instructed in the use of the various infantry weapons.

As all physically able boys take military for at least two years, the olive drab of the army is the predominating color each week, Monday through Thursday, when uniforms are worn.

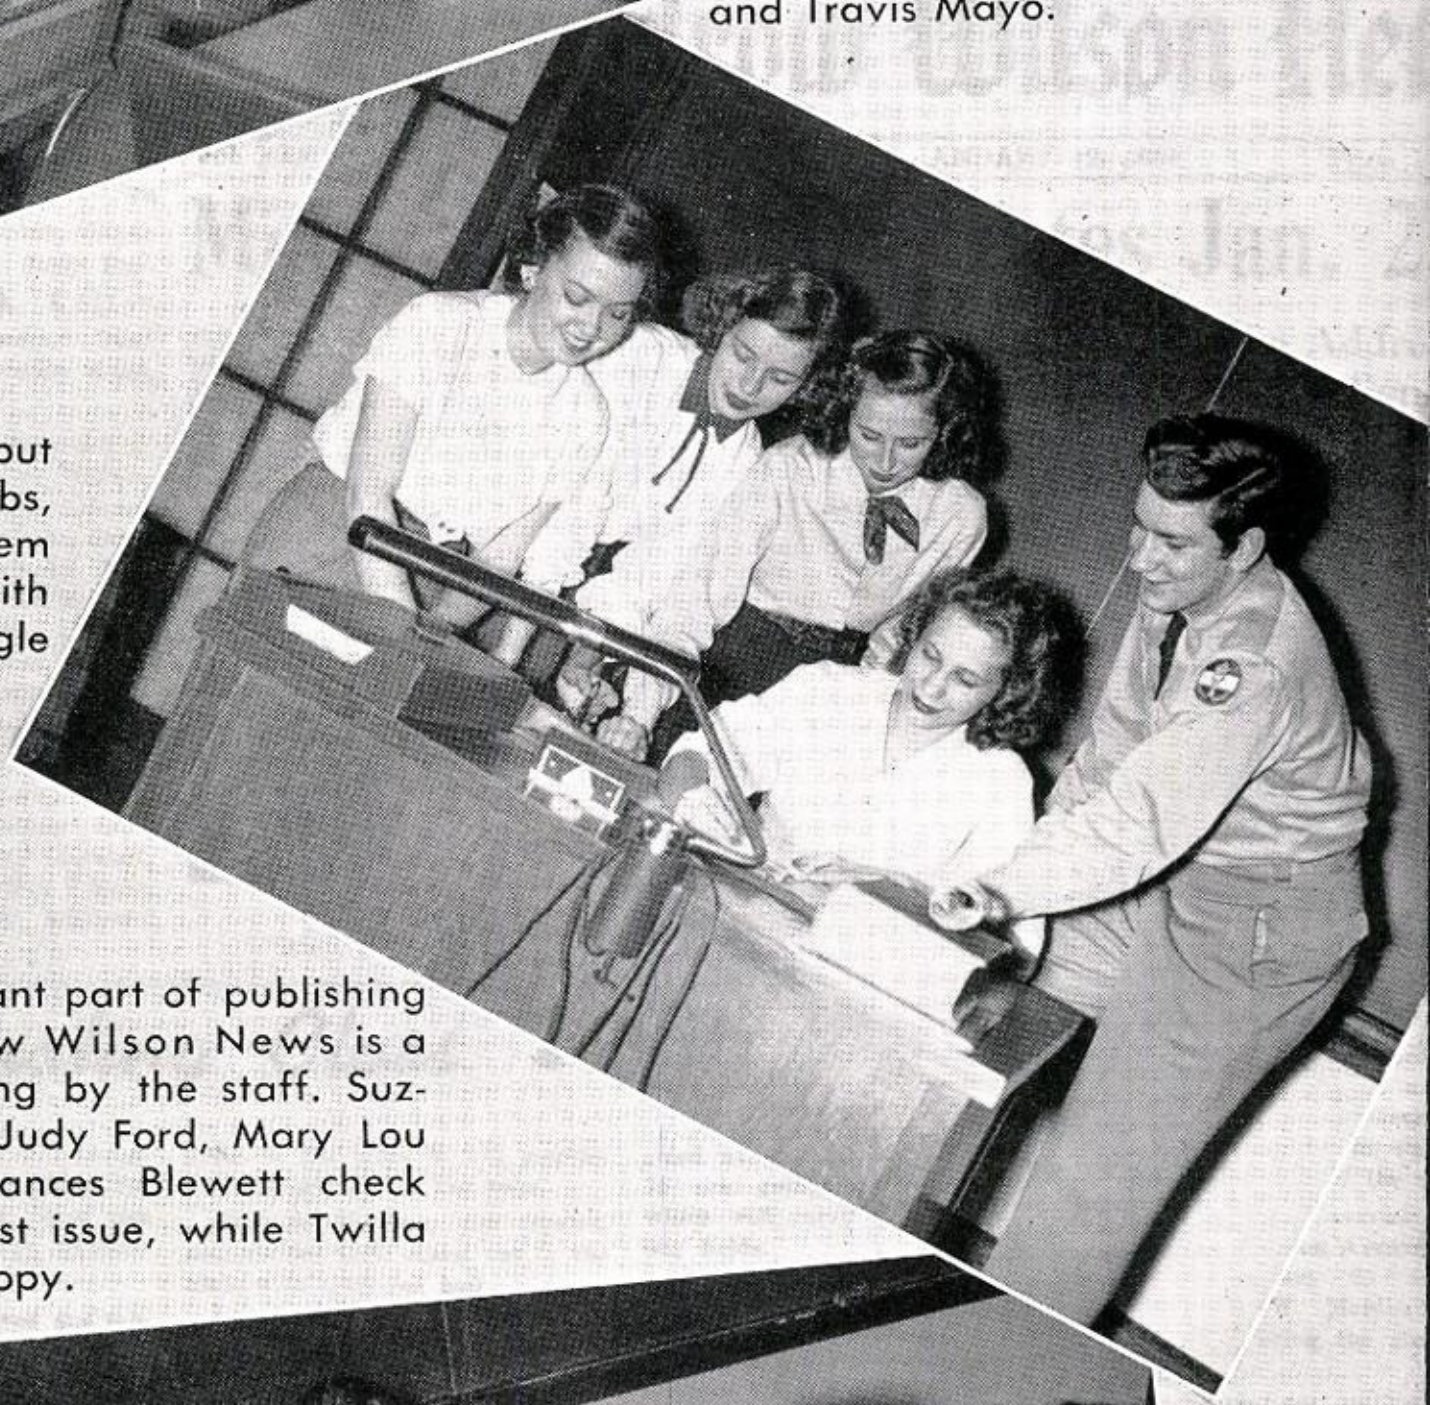
The Woodrow

Fall Staff

Pass the eraser! Working out headlines for the Woodrow Wilson News, Winnie Gearing and Nancy Hill run into a snag, while Jack Wahlquist offers his advice. Hard at work reading copy are Shirley Daniel, Joy Winters, Tom Galbraith, and Travis Mayo.

They'll tell you it's work, but Janet Corenbleth, Norma McCombs, Ann Franklin, and Jim Arnold seem to be enjoying it as they confer with Sylvia Weir on a new story angle for the paper.



An important part of publishing the Woodrow Wilson News is a critical reading by the staff. Suzanne Cates, Judy Ford, Mary Lou Kirk, and Frances Blewett check over the latest issue, while Twilla Short types copy.
